

Dear FCC,

As a flight attendant I find the news of the FCC considering allowing the use of cell phones in flight a cause for concern. Cabin safety would be compromised in the following areas:

1) There is no hard evidence that cell phones do NOT compromise the navigational equipment in an aircraft.

2) Cell phones would allow terrorists to coordinate a plan of action in flight more effectively.

3) The NPRM would leave it up to flight attendants to police the use of cell phones onboard the aircraft compromising our ability to maintain a safe, secure cabin environment and to conduct emergency evacuations.

Allowing the use of cell phones in flight would make an already tense situation even more stressful.

Please consider these arguments against the use of cell phones in-flight, from an individual who would be affected by your decision on a day to day basis.

Thank you for your time.

Jodie Jordan